Talya Feldman's audiovisual installation shines a light on the continuities of right-wing terror in Germany from 1979 to the present day through voice recordings of survivors, victims' families, and initiatives from 18 cities. The voices in the exhibition unsettle, connect the dots, accuse, demand justice and consequences. At the same time, they are encouraging and impressive testimonies of strong resistance and lived solidarity against a political exploitation of mourning and memory.

They are the voices we really should be listening to right now.

Talya Feldman

For the multimedia project, the Denver-born media artist, who currently lives in Hamburg and is a survivor of the right-wing terrorist attack in Halle herself, was awarded the 2nd DAGESH Art Prize. The exhibition was presented for the first time at the Jewish Museum Berlin until early August 2021. As part of the commemoration of the second anniversary of the right-wing terrorist attack in Halle (Saale) on October 9, 2019, the exhibition can now be visited for two weeks in Halle (Saale).
